PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION

Within the Philosophy and Religion program you can pursue a B.A. degree in Philosophy and Religion, Philosophy Legal Studies, or Philosophy Graduate Studies. A minor in Philosophy and Religion is also available. Detailed curriculum information can be found at www.stockton.edu/arhu.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO STUDY PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION AT STOCKTON

1. The Philosophy and Religion program is a place to come for an excellent education due to the unique, dynamic, and diverse areas of specialty and experiences that its faculty members create. Our courses prepare students as serious competitors for further study, professional careers, and, above all, a well-rounded education. Some of our graduates have received law degrees, master’s degrees in philosophy, library science, bioethics, theology, counseling, chiropractic, herbal medicine, and MFAs in poetry, while others are graduate students in psychology, osteopathic medicine, information sciences, and cognition, brain and behavior programs. [Adapting to Change]

2. To discover the rich history of ideas, and the foundation of the humanities and the arts. [Information Literacy & Research Skills]

3. To develop critical and creative skills in thinking, writing, and interpretation, and to be provided with time-tested tools of philosophical analysis. [Communication Skills, Creativity & Innovation]

4. To be inspired by the search for values and the quest for a deeply meaningful life. [Ethical Reasoning]

5. To become part of a vibrant community of scholars in the interpretation of the love of wisdom. [Teamwork & Collaboration]
SPECIAL OPPORTUNITIES

The International Honor Society (PST), Stockton Philosophical Society (SPS), the Classical Humanities Society (CHSSJ), and the Philosophy Speaker Series are active and exciting groups within the Philosophy and Religion program. For students interested in further discussion on philosophical and religious topics and themes, the SPS meets twice a week. Our chapter of PST (Phi Sigma Tau) the International Honor Society of Philosophy, with a rotating Faculty Advisor and three student officers, offers in-depth analysis of chosen topics and themes and the opportunity for students to publish in its journal Dialogue, and graduate with honors. The Classical Humanities Society of South Jersey (CHSSJ) brings speakers to campus for lectures on the classics and classical history disseminated through the humanities. The Philosophy Speaker Series invites scholars from area universities and colleges to lecture, visit, and have dinner with our Philosophy majors and minors.

THE PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION FACULTY

Rodger L. Jackson
Ph.D. (Michigan State University)
Professor of Philosophy: ethical theory, applied ethics, pragmatism, history of philosophy 609-626-6016
jacksonr@stockton.edu

Anne F. Pomeroy
Ph.D. (Fordham University)
Associate Professor of Philosophy: social and political philosophy, Marxism, critical theory, existentialism
609-652-4612
Anne.Pomeroy@stockton.edu

Lucio A. Privitello
Ph.D. (Villanova University)
Associate Professor of Philosophy: history of ancient Greek philosophy, history of modern western philosophy, contemporary continental philosophy, philosophy, philosophy and psychoanalysis, philosophy of art, classical American philosophy 609-652-4630
privitel@stockton.edu

Herman Saatkamp
Ph.D. (Vanderbilt University)
President, The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, Professor of Philosophy: American philosophy, George Santayana, naturalism, bioethics, and genetic explanations of complex behavior

A. Edward Siecienski
Ph.D. (Fordham University)
Associate Professor of Religion: historical theology, Patristic and Byzantine studies, Christian thought 609-626-6859
Edward.Siecienski@stockton.edu

Jongbok Yi
Ph.D. (University of Virginia)
Assistant Professor of Asian Philosophy: Chinese religions, Buddhist philosophy, Confucianism, Daoism, Shamanism, Hinduism
609-652-3490
Jongbok.Yi@stockton.edu

IT IS THE MARK OF AN EDUCATED MIND TO BE ABLE TO ENTERTAIN A THOUGHT WITHOUT ACCEPTING IT.

–ARISTOTLE