CARNEGIE LIBRARY CENTER

THE RICHARD STOCKTON COLLEGE OF NEW JERSEY

The Carnegie Library Center

The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, the Casino Reinvestment Development Authority (CRDA), and the City of Atlantic City collaborated in restoring the Carnegie Library in Atlantic City. This historic treasure, originally built in 1904, was a gift to the City by steel magnate and philanthropist Andrew Carnegie. The building served as the Public Library for more than eighty years until a new facility was completed in 1985.

Renamed the Carnegie Library Center, the facility underwent more than $5.5 million dollars in renovations and improvements, and reopened in May 2004. The three-story building features turn-of-the-century architecture, including granite, marble, and terra cotta exterior, terrazzo floors, scagliola-finished columns, and marble and iron staircases. However, its modernity lies in the continuance of Carnegie's vision of learning and commitment to the community.

Located one block from the World Famous Atlantic City Boardwalk, Carnegie presents Stockton with modern facilities in the heart of this urban community. The over 9,000 square-foot building is used as an educational and instructional facility, meeting place, conference center, and venue for community outreach. As the only four-year public higher education institution located along the Jersey shore, Carnegie serves as a central means by which Stockton fulfills its responsibility of civic engagement.

Carnegie was named one of the top 150 Buildings and Places in New Jersey by the American Institute of Architects of New Jersey in 2007. This selection was compiled from nominations received from members of New Jersey's architectural and historical communities and coincides with the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the American Institute of Architects.

In 2006 Carnegie won an Atlantic County Historic Preservation Award for Superior Example of Rehabilitation and Adaptive-Reuse of a Historic Structure given by the Atlantic County Office of Cultural & Heritage Affairs.

Programming

In addition to hosting a number of undergraduate and graduate courses, Stockton's Professional Development and Continuing Education (PDCE) Program offers a full range of non-credit and certificate opportunities in management development, professional services, paralegal studies, health sciences, and human services.

The Stockton Institute for Gaming Management offers workshops and courses to prepare students for work in the gaming industry as well as enhance the performance of individuals already in the industry who want to strengthen their leadership, managerial, and supervisory skills. 72 hours of coursework leads to a Stockton College Certificate in Basic Gaming Management. The institute also conducts research on issues critical to the growth of the gaming industry.

The Southern Regional Institute (SRI) and Educational Technology Training Center (ETTC) affords professional opportunities for preK-12 educators and other professionals who offer support services to schools.

The Small Business Development Center (SBDC) of Atlantic, Cape May and Cumberland Counties is part of a networked national partnership between state and federal government, the private sector, and higher education. The program is designed to provide the highest quality business assistance services to establish new enterprises and promising start-ups, with the objective of increased economic activity.

Civil Rights Garden

Adjacent to Carnegie is the Civil Rights Garden, a powerful tribute to the architects of the Civil Rights Movement. Annual commemorative and special events take place within the Garden and Carnegie provides support as a venue for accompanying lectures, receptions, and other events. The Garden is a serene oasis of plants, trees and flowers honoring the long journey of African Americans, and indeed all Americans, toward a full measure of rights under the United States Constitution.
