The Office of E-Learning provides institution-wide leadership in the development and delivery of technology-enhanced instruction. Our goal is to enable a rich learning environment that will provide students access to the intellectual tools and content mastery they need in order to achieve their professional and personal goals.

To meet that goal, we are committed to:

- Facilitating a full Stockton educational experience across all degree programs and all methods of earning credit
- Supporting and promoting quality educational experiences
- Providing access to campus services for distance learners
- Informing the educational process through data analysis
- Serving as a center for collaboration, innovation, and inspiration in using emerging technologies

Our services for faculty include:

- Consulting on instructional design
- Consulting on best practices for the integration of instructional technology
- Technical support for our e-learning products and services
- Individual, group, online, and on-demand training
- Assistance in recording and editing videos for instruction and student engagement

For students seeking details on hybrid and online courses, our website includes links to current course offerings. Stockton University offers undergraduate and graduate online and hybrid courses on a wide variety of topics including:
