Degree Programs: Undergraduate degrees are offered in Criminal Justice (CRIM), Economics (ECON), Political Science (POLI), Psychology (PSYC), Social Work (SOWK) and Sociology and Anthropology (SOAN). Interdisciplinary minors are offered in Behavioral Neuroscience, Gerontology, and Childhood Studies. At the graduate level, two degrees are offered: a Master of Social Work (MSW) with an elective specialization in management and a Master of Arts in Criminal Justice (MACJ) with tracks in Forensic Psychology, Justice Studies, and Homeland Security. Both programs are accredited and offer accelerated options for undergraduates. Students with a Bachelor’s degree in Social Work have earned Advanced Standing and may complete the MSW in one year rather than two. The Dual Degree program in Criminal Justice allows students to earn a B.A. and an M.A. degree in five years.

Dean’s Notes: Stockton CSI is a residential summer camp for high school students who want hands-on experience with criminal investigation, from crime scene to courtroom. Led by Stockton faculty and graduate students, Stockton CSI has received national media attention and has attracted campers from across the nation.

The Stockton Center on Successful Aging (SCOSA) promotes education, research, and services to respond to local, regional, and statewide needs related to population aging. SCOSA offers workshops, tours, lectures and other programs designed specifically for older adults.

Since the mid-1970s, nearly 1,000 Stockton students have completed the Washington Internship Program through Stockton’s affiliation with the Washington Center, the nation’s largest internship organization.

Stockton’s Baccalaureate Child Welfare Education program has been recognized by the New Jersey Department of Children and Families for its success in bringing undergraduate students into caseworker positions in Child Protection and Permanency (CP&P, formerly known as DYFS, Division of Youth and Family Services). To date, over 300 of these graduates have moved into careers as social workers with DCPP. Because of its statewide success, Stockton was invited to expand the program to include masters programs in social work. A newly created Child Welfare Education Institute (CWEI) places the Baccalaureate Child Welfare Education program and the new Masters Child Welfare Education program under one umbrella. The intent of the latter is to provide an opportunity for casework supervisors and other CP&P supervisors to earn the advanced degree part-time at Stockton, Monmouth University or Rutgers University. With the creation of CWEI came the addition of the New Jersey Child Welfare Training Partnership, Southern Region, which is responsible for providing continuing education training to approximately 1,400 DCPP employees across eight southern counties of the state.
