Galloway Township, NJ- Stockton Production Services (SPS), the in-house media production department at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, received two Telly awards for two separate works produced by Stockton staff members. SPS won a Silver Telly for “Hannah Price: City of Brotherly Love,” by Video Producer Kent Green, and a Bronze Telly for the marketing piece, “Ask Stockton,” by Video Producer Edward Cornell.

Stockton was selected as a Telly Award Winner out of nearly 12,000 entries from all 50 states and five continents. A judging panel of over 500 accomplished industry professionals, each a past winner of a Silver Telly and a member of The Silver Telly Council, judged the competition.

Green’s piece featured Hannah Price, a photographer whose work was exhibited at the Stockton Art Gallery.

“Denise McGarvey, director of the Stockton Art Gallery, and I have been trying our best to document the wonderful artists that pass through our halls here at the college,” Green said.

After the gallery’s ‘artist talk,’ Green filmed Price in a more person one-on-one interview, which served as the foundation for the entire production.

Green’s “City of Brotherly Love” was featured on NPR and went on to win the Silver Telly Award, the highest honor the Tellys bestow.

Cornell’s piece, “Ask Stockton,” was a promotional video made for the Stockton Student Senate. Cornell worked closely with the group on the concept and artistic direction for the video.

“I love bringing my creative vision to Stockton video productions,” he said.

Greg Collins, professional services specialist and “Stockton’s resident musical genius,” composed the original score for the “Ask Stockton” video, said Cornell.

“The Telly Awards has a mission to honor the very best in film and video,” said Linda Day, executive director of the Telly Awards. “The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey’s accomplishment illustrates their creativity, skill, and dedication to their craft and serves as a testament to great film and video production.”

Stockton Production Services now has a total of three Telly Awards. The program also received a Bronze Telly for its 2010 Scholarship Gala video, “Sharing The Magic,” which featured student, magician, and scholarship recipient Chad Juros sharing his inspiring story about his childhood struggle with cancer.

“Please allow me to take this opportunity to thank Mark Jackson, Shannon Aungst, and the entire Stockton Productions team,” Green said. “I am constantly in awe of their talent, hard work, and dedication. They push me to do my best work and are always willing to give it their all to help Stockton rise to any occasion.”
