

Office of Public Relations
Pomona, NJ 08240

Stockton College Offers “Discover Greece” Tour With Hellenic Studies Professors

For Immediate Release

Tuesday, February 27, 2007

Contact: Tim Kelly
 Stockton Public Relations
 (609) 652-4950

Galloway Twp., NJ -- The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey Friends of Hellenic Studies, in collaboration with College faculty scholars has scheduled a comprehensive tour of Greece from June 18 to June 30, 2007. The trip is open to the public.

More than just a vacation, this tour will provide travelers with the unique insights of Rev. Dr. Demetrios Constantelos, Distinguished Charles Townsend. Professor Emeritus of History and Religious Studies, and Dr. Tom Papademetriou, Assistant Professor of History and Director of the Interdisciplinary Center for Hellenic Studies.

The $3,450 cost of the trip (per person based on double occupancy) includes airfare, a guided tour with licensed English-speaking guides and accommodations at some of the finest hotels in Greece.

“This is a once-in a lifetime opportunity to tour Greece from a true insider’s perspective,” Papademetriou said. “Among our stops will be Spilia, a tiny agricultural village with ancient roots, and the birthplace of Dr. Constantelos.”

A noted Byzantine historian and theologian, Drs. Constantelos and Papademetriou will be leading a tour to many of the glorious sites throughout this nation, which inspired much of Western civilization. Travelers will walk on the stone paths of Mystra, a preserved medieval city on a Peloponnesian mountainside, as well as Athens and the Acropolis and the museums and modern attractions of Athens, which hosted the 2004 Olympics.

The tour includes Delphi, Mycenae, Mystra, Epidavros, Pylos and four nights on the island of Kefalonia. Superior hotels with views, breakfast and some other meals are included.

The trip is limited to 35 participants. For more information, please contact Barbara Christie Arbes at (973) 635-0893 or visit www.Masterpiecetravel.com.

#