Galloway Township, NJ- Audrey Wolfson Latourette, a professor in the School of Business at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, recently presented her research article on plagiarism and deservedly received the Pacific Southwest Academy of Legal Studies 2010 Double-Blind-Peer-Reviewed Best Paper Award. The presentation engendered an extraordinary response from the audience and was rewarded with both a plaque and a cash award.

Latourette's award-winning article, "Plagiarism: Legal and Ethical Implications for the University," will be published in Volume 37 of the Journal of College and University Law, a law review published by Notre Dame Law School and the National Association of College and University Attorneys. According to Notre Dame, this law review is the only one in the country dedicated solely to higher education law and boasts one of the highest circulations of any journal in the country; it is also a peer-reviewed journal.

The Pacific Southwest Academy of Legal Studies in Business is one of eight regional subdivisions of the Academy of Legal Studies in Business. The Academy, which is comprised of professors at traditional law schools as well as professors of law in colleges and universities, provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and encourages support and cooperation among those who teach and conduct research in the field of legal studies. Members come from all fifty states, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Ireland, England and a number of other nations.

Professor Latourette is a cum laude graduate of Temple University Law School. While earning her degree, she served as associate editor of the Temple Law Review, and before coming to Stockton, she practiced law with the Philadelphia firm Wolf, Block, Schorr, and Solis-Cohen. Since 1971, Professor Latourette has been a member of the Stockton community. The following is a sampling of courses that she teaches at Stockton: "Legal and Social Environment of Business," "Ethics and Law in Contemporary Society" and "Perspectives on Women." # # #
