Galloway Township, NJ- The Stockton Center on Successful Aging (SCOSA) will present a free professional seminar on client satisfaction in a managed care environment and the options related to professional and family caregiving for the aging.

“Caregiving: Options, Issues and Client Satisfaction” is scheduled for Thursday, April 11, 2013 from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. at The Shores at Wesley Manor, 2201 Bay Avenue, Ocean City. Right at Home and The Shores at Wesley Manor are sponsoring the seminar, which is free and open to the public.

The presenter is Gina M. Maguire, MSW, LSW, who is a Stockton gerontology adjunct instructor.

Client satisfaction is an important outcome measure in a managed care environment and it is a critical component in maintaining effective professional and family caregiving relationships. In this seminar Maguire will discuss key issues and options related to professional and family caregiving for aging persons. Participants will learn about strategies and resources available to manage family caregiver stress, provide quality care to family members, maintain effective caregiver collaboration and communication across geographic and infrastructure boundaries, and define and identify resources for culturally competent caregiving.

The seminar, designed for professionals, para-professionals and other caregivers who work with older adults is free of charge and includes a complimentary dinner. Upon completion, participants will receive 2 continuing education credits (CEs) for social workers, marriage and family therapists, and licensed professional counselors.
