

Stockton to Screen 'Stray Dog,' a Portrait Of Vietnam Vet, in Recognition of Veterans Day

Film to be Shown Oct. 29 in Hammonton; Nov. 6 in Manahawkin

For Immediate Release

Wednesday, October 14, 2015

Contact: Christina Butterfield
News and Media Relations
Galloway, NJ 08205
Christina.Butterfield@Stockton.edu
(609) 626-3845
www.stockton.edu/media

Galloway, NJ – Stockton University will host two free screenings of the film "Stray Dog," a portrait of a motorcycle-riding Vietnam veteran, in honor of Veterans Day. Both events are free and open to the public.

The first screening will be held on Thursday, Oct. 29 at 5 p.m. at Kramer Hall, located at 30 Front St. in Hammonton. Please RSVP to the Hammonton screening by calling 609-626-3837.

The second screening will be held on Friday, Nov. 6 at 10:30 a.m. at the Manahawkin Instructional Site, located at 712 East Bay Ave. in Manahawkin. Please RSVP to the Manahawkin screening by calling 609-626-3883.

From Debra Granik, director of the Oscar-nominated "Winter's Bone," comes this portrait of Ronnie "Stray Dog" Hall, whose life is about much more than what initially meets the eye. Behind the tattoos and leather vest is a man dedicated to helping his fellow vets and immigrant family as he also comes to terms with his combat experience.

This is one of a series of films that will be shown at Stockton through the Indie Lens Pop-Up, a neighborhood series that brings people together for film screenings and community-driven conversations. Featuring documentaries seen on the PBS series Independent Lens, Indie Lens Pop-Up draws local residents, leaders, and organizations to discuss what matters most, from newsworthy topics to family and relationships. Make friends, share stories and join the conversation.

For more information on the film, visit: <http://www.pbs.org/independentlens/films/stray-dog/> ###