Galloway Township, NJ - Kramer Hall, Stockton University's instructional site in Hammonton, NJ, will host workshops and an exhibit as part of the Atlantic County Teen Arts Festival on Friday, May 1.

High school students' visual art projects will be exhibited in Kramer Hall's Art Gallery and throughout the building. There also will be hands-on workshops for teens to learn from professionals in a variety of arts-related fields.

The Atlantic County Teen Arts is part of a statewide multidisciplinary program in the fine and performing arts and has been available to young people in Atlantic County in varying formats since 1969.

Open to any student in public or private school, as well as home-schooled students and those who are involved in extra-curricular private instruction, the program includes activities in dance, theater, vocal music, instrumental music, film, photography, creative writing and the visual arts. The festival will take place in a variety of venues in Hammonton's Arts District.

The Kramer Hall events begin at 9 a.m. at 30 Front St. in downtown Hammonton.

The Atlantic County Festival is coordinated by the Atlantic County Office of Cultural and Heritage Affairs in collaboration with Stockton University, the Noyes Museum/Stockton, Hammonton Art Center, The Eagle Theatre, Hammonton Arts District and other arts and educational organizations.
